

Consider Talbot County for an alluring and romantic escape

Maryland Tourism

The Inn at Perry Cabin provides luxury accommodations, expansive grounds, and beautiful water views.

A certain peacefulness settles in as you cross the Chesapeake Bay Bridge. What is it about Maryland's Eastern Shore that drains away stress? The answer isn't as important as the reality of the assertion. It's tempting to catalogue the idea for a future getaway, but what better time to consider than February, the month for romantic escapes! On the shore, Talbot County has too much to offer to be overlooked.

Easton, the county seat, is located right off Route 50. Chock full of history, art galleries, fine dining, and entertainment, the town serves as a hub of commerce and social activities. But there are countless hideaway options throughout the county. Here are a few to consider.

The Inn at 202 Dover in Easton originated as the grandest residence in town and was built around 1874. Today, it serves as a boutique inn where quality service and attention to detail makes it special. Whether it's the elegant luxury suites, the personalized service, or the ironed sheets, the thoughtful touches guarantee your stay will be special and memorable.

If you don't stay the night, at least enjoy a romantic dinner at The Peacock Restaurant and Lounge. Start out with a flight of three or four vodkas from the extensive list. For dinner, our recommendations are the filet and lobster dishes, although there are many other choices which rival the best you can find at any DC urban chic venue. Whatever you select, be sure to ask for a wine recommendation — the staff's expertise in pairings is noteworthy! (innat202dover.com)

The Robert Morris Inn dates to about 1710 and is perhaps the most notable landmark in Oxford. The inn is directly across from the Oxford Bellevue Ferry, which has been hauling passengers since 1683. Once the home of Robert Morris, financier of the American Revolution, the inn is steeped in history and charm. It's a great place to stay and relax; you won't have a TV in your room to distract you. This is a place to truly unwind and disconnect.

It's also a place to have delicious meals created by chef-partner Mark Salter and to explore new culinary experiences. Salter's cooking classes, Tuscan Food and Wine Pairings, New Zealand Food and Wine Pairings, or Bouchaune Food and Wine Pairings, tantalize the taste buds and educate you for future culinary delights. The Inn at Perry Cabin captivated movie-goers after the main wedding reception scene from "The Wedding Crashers" was filmed there.
